Subject: Debit Card Fees

To Whom it may concern,

I wanted to voice my opinion on the point-of-sale transaction fee imposed by the banks and full disclosure of said fees. I have been charged fees for these transactions, without knowing at the time I would be charged. I think it is an injustice for banking institutions, not to fully disclose these fees to the consumer. When my account statement arrived with these fees imposed, it was a complete surprised, and I would not have used my card in such a manner if I had been aware of the fee.

I am a college graduate and run my own company, have six figures banked in investments and cash, own my own home, and consider myself an educated person. If I somehow missed the disclosure of these fees, I imagine most of the general public did as well. I urge you to impose stricter discloser laws I would be in favor of periodic statement disclosure as well as year-end amounts.

Sincerely,
Kevin Fox
