Subject: Truth in Lending

To whom it may concern:

As a young mother of two young boys I find it hard to get through every day tasks without thinking about how my financial situation worsened when the credit card companies targeted me while I attended college living on campus while only 18 years of age only to find that I could get more than one and quickly to now have several thousand dollars in debt because of un-explained hidden fees, over limit fees and late payment charges tacked onto my balances. I'd like to not see any other teens and college bound early twenties adolescents find themselves in my position and have the fed and whomever else put a stop to the credit card companies evil tactics.

Sincerely,

Alisha M. Jeffers
